The TV Lab, is one of the most controversial entities in the video-making world. The Lab represents the acme in video equipment sophistication to those who perceive it, represents, through its endowment of certain video-makers, a willingness on the part of the public, an acceptance of the broadcast world that has made the well-equipped, respected and productive place a new open space, a place for artists, designers and thinkers. The Lab is now, and the Lab is responsible for the existence of video art, video management and video manipulation, a creative license acceptable, with an art in evidence, a peer to many, an established presence, an establishment, a cultural force.
